ABOUT

Combining a reverence for classic guitar-driven indie with an often sardonic sense of humor, Gold Stars For Everyone creates a style of rock'n'roll that defies easy categorization.

They've performed at packed Brooklyn house parties, outdoors at the Grand Canyon, and everywhere in-between en route to establishing themselves as one of the most unpredictable acts in the genre. Now, with the release of their most compelling music to date, GSFE is on the brink of reaching a global audience.

CONNECT

Gold Stars For Everyone was formed around the songwriting of frontman Pedro Danger. Inspired by his travels across the United States, he joined up with bandmates Bobby Garramone, Bryan Langlotz, Ben "Ultrabot" Garelick, and a rotating cast of collaborators to create a sound that is as thought provoking as it is danceable.

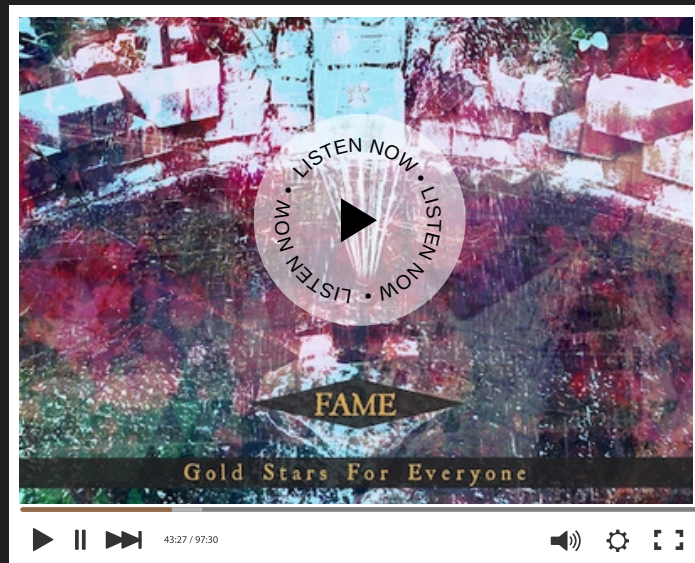

Gold Stars For Everyone's latest project is a set of seven EP's inspired by Dante's Divine Comedy. They bring the concepts of this historical text to life in vivid detail, using the lessons of the past to explore distinctly modern themes of success and identity. It is an ambitious project - one that highlights their ability to explore dark topics without losing the instant accessibility that defines their best work. With a steady stream of new material and international performances planned, GSFE continues to push the boundaries of indie music with every release.

"Ginger Cola" by Gold Stars For Everyone is comforting and nostalgic. No matter what, it will make you feel something, whether it makes you reflect on life, channel a memory, or think about the future. In my listening experience, I've found that this song has the ability to do all three of those things.

Gold Stars For Everyone's Fame & Infamy is Brooklyn based, bluesy alt-rock made by people that have to know that they're good. Take a listen to the gentle growl of the vocals for proof! Gold Stars For Everyone could well be the beautiful cheerleader who never gets asked out because everyone is too afraid to approach them. But, fortunately, their hearts are trampled and hurt. The New Yorkers take the gift of misery, wrap it in a bluesy garland of vocals and approach the casting calls confidently
